Give your views on £37m redevelopment of Tottenham Hale

By Lucy Purdy

PLANS to scrap the notorious Tottenham Hale Gyrotory system in a proposed £37million overhaul have gone out for public consultation.

Residents now have until December 3 to give their views on the planned redevelopment, which is being put forward by Haringey Council and Transport for London. A TFL overhaul, some 1,600 new homes, 30,000sq m of office and shop space and new parks and community buildings could spring up in place of the current one-way traffic system, which the council has admitted is "over-congested and confusing".

In October 2006, the council published the Tottenham Hale Urban Centre Masterplan to guide development in the area. Since then, key landowners in the Tottenham Hale have been developing ideas for their sites and construction on the former Greater London Supplies site in Hale Village has already got under way.

Options include using the recycling centre in Ashley Road for housing or focusing new development nearer to Tottenham Hale station. This could involve building new homes on the southern section of Down Lane Park and replacing the open space by extending the park onto the Ashley Road depot site.

"The proposals bring much-needed funding, housing and jobs."

Both options are likely to cause controversy: the Pavilion Nursery in Park View Road may have to relocate in the second option, while the possibility of changing the layout of Down Lane Park has already sparked concern.

Haringey Council leader Claire Kober urged all residents to give their views on the huge development, which is scheduled to begin in 2012.

She said: "It's really important to us that residents let us know what they think."

"This is all about the future of Tottenham and it will affect them, their children and their grandchildren. The proposals bring much-needed funding, housing and jobs to this area and we want residents and businesses to help us shape the future."

TFL is proposing to turn the clogged one-way system into a two-way traffic scheme, creating a new bus station and public square. They say it will make the area "more pleasant" and safer for pedestrians, cyclists and drivers. Better-placed bus stops and improvements for cyclists will also be key.

The council and TFL have sent out information to more than 7,000 households and are inviting residents to view exhibition boards at Marcus Garvey library in Tottenham Green leisure centre until December 3. Council and TFL officers will be there to answer questions from November 5-7.

Council officers are also holding open meetings about the development on November 2 and 4. For more details and to view the options, visit www.haringey.gov.uk

Sir Paul refutes fears over armed police on the streets

By Lucy Purdy

LONDON'S police chief has denied there will be regular armed patrols in areas such as Tottenham and said a "mistaken impression" had been created by some of his senior officers.

Community leaders and politicians in Haringey were angry and shocked when Inspector Derek Carroll appeared in Police Review to announce magazine that officers armed with machine guns would regularly patrol areas that are blighted by gun crime.

Although a pilot project involving specialist officers from the CO19 Proactive Unit has been under way since June, including in the Broadwater Farm Estate, Metropolitan Police commissioner Sir Paul Stephenson released a statement last week expressing regret over the way the issue was handled.

He said: "Fewer than ten intelligence-led specific operations have been undertaken by CO19 which involved providing back up to neighbourhood teams. These were planned operations with specific objectives and timescales. This tactic was put together by officers for the best of reasons, to support and protect the local community and local unarmed officers. I believe unfortunately that there has been a failure to appreciate that this could look like a significant change of policing style.

"I am very proud of the unarmed civilian service tradition of the Metropolitan Police Service and am determined to uphold it."

The news sparked widespread outrage in Haringey that years of relationship-building between police and the community could be damaged and that armed officers would only alienate residents and demonise the borough. Joanne McCartney, a member of police watchdog the Metropolitan Police Authority, demanded an explanation on the apparent unauthorised change in tactics.

Seeking to reassure those concerned, Sir Paul added: "Although we have seen a recent increase in gun crime, it remains lower than two years ago.

"If in the future it becomes necessary to extend uniformed armed deploy-

Guns and half kilo stash of class-A seized

POLICE in Haringey are continuing their fight against the illegal drugs trade operating throughout the borough.

Three loaded guns and half a kilo of crack cocaine were found by officers from Haringey's Crime Squad after forcing their way into a house in St Margaret's Road, Tottenham, on October 23. Three men – a 29-year-old, 41-year-old and a 51-year-old – were arrested.

Officers have also closed down a crack house in Effingham Road, Hornsey, which was also linked to prostitution. Haringey's Drugs Focus Unit and Haringey Safer Neighbourhood team uncovered evidence of crack cocaine use when they searched the house in September after several residents complained of anti-social behaviour. A closure order was granted by magistrates on October 21 to shut the property for three months.

Detective Sergeant Jason Turkington, from the Drugs Focus Unit, said: "This address has been causing serious nuisance and disorder and has been linked to the supply and consumption of class A drugs and prostitution."

Seventeen crack houses have been closed down in Haringey in the past four months after officers carried out 100 drug-related warrants.

Anyone with information about drugs should call 0300 123 1212.

Commons steps into debate over unfair funding of borough's schools

A DEBATE on the "unfair" funding system which sees schools in Haringey get £1,000 less per pupil than in other inner London boroughs, will be heard in Parliament later today.

Hornsey and Wood Green MP Lynne Featherstone will press government ministers for answers on the funding disparity.

She said: "This situation is entirely unjust and unacceptable. Year in, year out, this funding system disadvantages Haringey's children and leaves our local schools struggling to make ends meet."

"Schools in Haringey have the same costs and problems as those in neighbouring boroughs so why should they qualify for less funding?"

A once glorious theatre is crumbling away before our eyes

AN EERIE silence lies over Alexandra Palace's crumbling Victorian theatre, which is hidden behind locked doors just metres away from the excitable half-term buzz of the ice-rink and close to the better-known main hall, home to regular gigs by big name rock bands.

The once-magnificent red and pink paintwork is now faded, ornate plaster crumbles from every wall and holes up to a metre wide expose the wooden beams of the damp-

By Lucy Purdy

decaying ceiling. Two disintegrating plaster statues stand either side of the stage which once held vivid shows of music, variety and drama but which has lain empty and dusty for years. Underneath, fantastically intricate wooden stage machinery, built for elaborate theatrical transformations by the skilled craftsmen of the day, remains remarkably intact.

Many visitors to Ally Pally are unaware even of its existence, and most, I think, would be shocked or at least depressed by the state of the once-beautiful, Grade II-listed building.

Restoration work to the tune of £90,000 is urgently needed, a Palace Trustees report confirmed last week – but funding has yet to be found. And even that sum would be only a stop-gap measure.

About £2million extra funding is needed for more extensive, permanent repairs when the theatre's future role in the Palace's turbulent history has been decided. Some work has been carried out during the past 12 years, including making the roof watertight, stabilising the internal ceiling and mending some of the wooden structures under the stage. Currently, visitors can only see the theatre through a perspex window in the foyer, because of the danger of pieces of masonry plummeting from the walls and ceiling. About 400 people caught a tantalising glimpse during a heritage open day last month.

Behind the scenes as Ally Pally's forgotten gem lies in desperate need of funds “Sadly, even with the interim repairs completed, we’d still be unable to lift this restriction because of health and safety issues,” explained Andrew Gill, interim general manager of the Palace’s charitable trust, who made the report.

"Haringey Council is going through its business and financial planning process and it's already clear that resources are severely constrained," he added. "A priority now is to explore other ways of raising the money."

English Heritage has long declared a commitment to help preserve the building and is one possible source of funding. The Heritage Lottery Fund or Theatres Trust are others.

Last used for small events including play readings and film screenings and previously as a television scene store, the theatre is now an abandoned relic of its former glory. It boasts just one single balcony facing the stage with an original second upper balcony now removed and electrical wires even poke through the crumbling walls.

Because its original building has been declared poor in design, its most likely use is not as a theatre but as a unique, evocative setting for recitals, or the shooting of music videos or films. As we wandered about the dimly lit stage, clad in hard hats, I could imagine this as a feasible route to generating income from the theatre once more.

Nigel Willmott, chairman of the Friends of Alexandra Palace Theatre, said: "It's sad but we realise it's beyond the resources of the charity. This requires serious amounts of money. Apparently the acoustics are particularly good for music so it could be used for concerts. It would also be good to see it used again for those rather spectacular pantomime-like performances using the fantastic under-stage machinery.

"We will be working with the trust to stump up the funds to secure the structure and bring the auditorium back into use at the earliest possible time."

Another report on the theatre's future will be presented to the board next year.

YOUNG people in Hornsey turned their estate into a photographic exhibition last week under the tuition of a celebrity photographer.

Striking photos in colour and black and white adorned the walls of the Campsbourne estate on Friday in an exhibition designed to show the area through the eyes of its young people.

Ray Burmiston, who photographed former Boyzone singer Stephen Gately just weeks before his death, helped teenagers on the estate create Campsbourne in Pictures – Past, Present And Future. The exhibition was organised by Homes for Haringey.

Three years' jail as heroin intercepted

By Lucy Purdy

A MAN from Tottenham has been jailed for three years and will be deported after he helped import three quarters of a kilo of heroin into the UK.

Officers arrested 24-year-old Chidubem Okoli, of Dawlish Road, after a parcel containing clothes and heroin was intercepted by HM Revenue and Customs officers at Coventry airport in June. It was destined for Durban Road in Tottenham.

Police removed the drugs from the package and arranged for it to be delivered as planned. Covert officers lying in wait at the house in Durban Road saw another man sign for the parcel before both he and Okoli drove off with the package stashed in the tyre well of the car boot.

The car was stopped in High Road, Tottenham, and both men arrested. Officers searching the house found Okoli's laptop which contained evidence he had been tracking the parcel online.

He pleaded guilty on October 6 and received an automatic deportation along with his sentence last Friday. No further action was taken against the other man.

Detective Constable Matt Dumpleton, of Haringey's Proactive Crime Unit, said: "This case demonstrates that working in partnership we can take significant quantities of illegal drugs out of circulation and bring to justice those concerned in their supply."

"We will continue to work in partnership to crack down on illegal drugs and the misery they cause within our community."

Seven years for raider of bookies

Jailed: Rodney
Adams

By Lucy Purdy

A MAN who robbed a bookmakers at gunpoint, leaving a member of staff so traumatised she left her job, has been sentenced to seven years in prison.

Rodney Adams, of no fixed abode, threatened to shoot the female cashier and another male staff member before taking about £600 of cash from the tills at Coral bookmakers in Green Lanes, Hornsey, on September 6 last year.

The 40-year-old demanded they open the safe but they were unable to do so because it was time-locked.

He told the 22-year-old woman:

"Don't set off any alarms or I'll shoot you," and then left the shop with his look-out who had been waiting by the door.

An eagle-eyed officer recognised Adams from CCTV footage and, following a detailed investigation into the criminal's phone records, he was arrested in July this year.

After pleading guilty in September to robbery and possessing an imitation firearm, Adams was sentenced on October 23 at Wood Green Crown Court.

Detective Sergeant Katie Bays said: "The two staff members threatened during this robbery were extremely shaken up, so much so that one changed the branch they worked at and one left the company altogether. It is unacceptable for anyone to have to face violence or the threat of violence while they are in the workplace."

Operation Betguard has been set up by the Metropolitan Police to tackle the growing number of London bookmakers being raided, many repeatedly targeted.

Officers are still keen to trace Adams' accomplice, described as black and in his thirties.

Anyone with information should contact DS Katie Bays on 0208 358 1751.

PASSERS-BY were left dumbfounded last week when they saw a children's car parked in Tottenham had been slapped with a fine.

A peddle-driven Tiny Tikes car, parked near the verge in Park View Lane, was given a penalty fare notice for parking illegally.

Haringey Council denied all knowledge of the ticket and said it was a "practical joke".

A spokeswoman said: "We don't issue tickets to children's cars. And we cannot issue one without a registration number."

All set to light up Ally Pally

ORGANISERS hope the week goes with a bang as north London prepares to host one of the best firework displays throughout London.

Once again one of the biggest displays for miles around will be the traditional spectacular at Alexandra Palace - taking place this Saturday.

Explosive pyrotechnics, funky music and fearless funfair rides are offered at the Wood Green venue throughout the day, with thousands expected to attend probably the best fireworks event north of the river.

The half-hour display will begin at 7.30pm with rockets launching more than 1,000 ft into the air, set to a choreographed soundtrack.

Helping to brew up a party atmosphere at the event will be a German Bier Fest taking place in the Great Hall from 4.30pm to 11pm.

What is now billed as the "country's biggest German Bier Festival" features an oompah band, Bavarian-style table service from the frauleins, and traditional German beers.

Adding to the party atmosphere will be one half of Chas 'n' Dave, Chas Hodges, who is now going solo with his own band, but has still promised to play the boys' cockney classics.

Entrance is by donation; suggested donation being £4 (adults) and £2 (children). Exclusive packages are available including entrance to the dedicated family viewing area which offers entry into the Panorama Room with an impressive view of the display from the terrace.

For more details call the Alexandra Palace box office on 020 8365 4300. Note: the road will be closed through the park from 6pm onwards.

Devilish drawings and spine-tingling surprises at Halloween play group

YOUNGSTERS in Muswell Hill had a frightful time making pompom spiders, dangling doughnuts and plaster-cast hands on a Halloween-themed play scheme last week.

Terrible tattoos and slimy surprises were also on the menu at the Fortis Green Kids' Club half-term playscheme at Our Lady of Muswell RC Primary School in Pages Lane.

About 30 children aged between four and 12 years old went along each day to enjoy the activities which also included less ghoulish games such as football, puzzles and arts and crafts.

"I'm a big fan of Halloween myself," explained play leader Siobhan O'Hara.

"The kids love anything which is slimy, gooey, gory or gruesome so I think they've had a really good time!"

Miss O'Hara also runs an after school club during term time. Visit www.fortisgreenkidsclub.org to find out more.

NATIONAL PANDEMIC FLU SERVICE

www.direct.gov.uk/pandemicflu

INFORMATION 0800 1 513 513

TREATMENT 0800 1 513 100

THE NATIONAL PANDEMIC FLU SERVICE

If you think you have swine flu, stay at home and contact the National Pandemic Flu Service. You can go online at www.direct.gov.uk/pandemicflu or call 0800 1 513 100. This service is only available in England.

You should do this if you have a high temperature and symptoms such as a runny nose, unusual tiredness, headache, aching muscles, loss of appetite and coughing. You'll be given immediate help and if needed you'll be given antivirals to speed your recovery.

If you are confirmed as having swine flu, you may be given an authorisation number which will allow your nominated flu friend to collect a course of antiviral medication for you from a local collection point in your area. Flu friends will need to provide proof of their identity and the authorisation number when they collect the antivirals for you.

However, if you are pregnant, or have a serious underlying condition or a sick child under one, or if you or your child's condition suddenly gets much worse, you should contact your doctor and not the National Pandemic Flu Service.

The swine flu vaccination programme is getting underway, and if you are pregnant or have an underlying health condition, it will be available from your GP soon.

Flu. Protect yourself and others.

Calls to this number are free from UK landlines and mobiles.

Puppets tug adult heart strings

Jacksons Lane's pioneering genre tells story of transplants

JACKSONS Lane is enjoying another first – being one of a select band of venues to host the first festival of adult puppetry to take place in the capital for more than 25 years.

The Suspense London Puppetry Festival has already seen one production at the Archway venue, last weekend's Fish Clay Perspex, and this week sees a performance from Full Beam Visual Theatre and The Empty Space.

Both are intriguing, the former focuses on getting older while Heartbreak Soup looks at younger people and the emotive issue of heart transplants. "It's a really special show," said producer Natalie Querol. "Laura, the writer and director, worked as a clown doctor at the children's heart unit in Newcastle. When she started to work there a lot of people said to her that must be really traumatic and upsetting but she disagreed and said what an amazing world it was to enter because people hold life so precious there; it was uplifting rather than upsetting." Using puppets Laura, Natalie and co have created a tale of Cuddy who is preparing for the operation that will transform him from a blue boy into a pink one. Subsequently most of the play takes place when Cuddy is under anaesthetic on the operating table.

"One of the things children in hospital are encouraged to do is draw a picture of where they want to go when they are asleep," said Natalie. "And Cuddy is worried that when the surgeon is changing his heart all of his nice memories will go.

"It's an extraordinary piece and when people come out there are very moved and thoughtful but also smiling."

● Heartbreak Soup takes place this Saturday at 8pm and Sunday at 2pm. Tickets cost £6.95. It is not suitable for under nines. Call 020 8341 4421.

Out and about

● AMNESTY is being offered in Highgate this Sunday. The Amnesty International Winter Concert takes place at United Reformed Church in Pond Square from 7.30pm. Violinist Simon Fischer plays Vivaldi and Bach with the Chamber Orchestra and tickets cost £15 (£10 concs) with all proceeds going to Amnesty. Call 020 7883 5631.

● LA Cage Aux Folles star Gabriel Vick is this week's turn at the Lauderdale Cabaret. British and American composers feature in his set list plus a few anecdotes from a varied career. Elena Rossi, who has also had an eventful stage career, supports. Show takes place at the venue in Archway Road, Highgate and starts at 4.30pm. Tickets cost £13 (£11 concs). Call the box office on 020 8348 8716.

● A FEW years ago I was writing about Mackenzie Crook at the famous Downstairs Try Out Night. Who next to scale the heights, we wonder? Gerry Erhard, Henry Widdicombe, David Hamilton or Renata Muff perhaps? How about Helen Boobis, Tony Pinman, Kishore Nayar or even Jessica Fostekew? Find out Downstairs at the King's Head in Crouch End from 8pm. Tickets cost £4 (£3 concs). Call the box office on 020 8340 1028.

Staring into space

The Men Who Stare At Goats (15)

Dir: Grant Heslov
Starring: George Clooney,
Ewan McGregor, Jeff Bridges,
Stephen Lang

GREAT book; gormless film. Journalist Jon Ronson's stranger-than-fiction bestseller exposed the bizarre story of the First Earth Battalion: a secret US military unit developed to fight combat... with their minds!

These new age, paranormal obsessed mavericks seemed quite benign in a David Icke kind of way and spent time trying to walk through walls and kill goats with a stare before matters took a darker turn in the "war on terror".

Casting some worrying light on the military American psyche, the book reads like a modern fairytale, which must have helped producers imagine it would lend itself readily to the tale-telling big screen.

But, like another recent mind-blowing exposé, Fast Food Nation, what reads so well on the page fails to make the leap into cinematic life, thanks in part to the fragmentary nature of the original.

It starts well and for a time we're gripped. In the 1980s a Dr Strange-glove type nut, General Hopgood (Lang), psyches himself up to walk through a wall with inevitably painful results. Cut to a few years ago as a reporter (McGregor) - modelled on Ronson - interviews a guy who claims to travel the world using his mind after being inspired by Hopgood and Lyn Cassady (Clooney).

They in turn are students of the legendary Bill Django (Bridges), a high ranking officer who had a Dam-ascan-style conversion in Vietnam and now indulges in new age techniques, primal arm wrestling and calling his men Jedi warriors.

All good, crazy fun but then the screenwriter and director lose themselves in the detail and develop a thousand-yard-stare of inaction before springing themselves out of it for a final, fictitious act - an injection of action that merely belies the queuing nature of their source material.

It's still watchable thanks to some enjoyable performances with Jeff Bridges the laid-back highlight, as if his Dude from The Big Lebowski had mistakenly become enrolled in the military with nothing for company but a vast quantity of mind-bending drugs.

An Education (12A)

16-year-old Jenny is intoxicated by a glamorous world of cock-tails, jazz and an older man in early 1960s' London. Lynn Barber's memoir is transformed into an enjoyable period outing but lacks drama and any emotional connection.

Almost a great animation but, like the central character, it loses its tail and ends up going round in circles. Roald Dahl's beguiling fantasy is Americanised by director Wes Anderson who captures the essential strangeness helped by the voices of Meryl Streep and... Jarvis Cocker!

Couples Retreat (15)

Go skinny dipping with piranhas, invite X-Factor's Jedward around for karaoke... do all of these rather than paying hardcash to see this self-indulgent, tedious anti-comedy about four dull couples on a holiday island.

The Godfather (15)

Re-release of one of the greatest films ever made. A rare synergy of thrilling script, masterly direction from Francis Ford Coppola and great actors (Brando, Pacino and Caan) ensure it's still a must-see.

Regency reaches status of neither prince nor pauper

The Gannets

Regency, 12-14 Mutton Lane, Potters Bar. 01707 658 810

BETTER to light a candle than to curse the darkness, as the Chinese proverb states.

But it's difficult to shed light on the banquet Genial Gannet and I enjoyed as so much of it was... distinctly average.

Satisfactory seaweed, passable pork, regular ribs... there was nothing remotely abhorrent about our meal, in fact, in many ways, it hit the spot. But, as with many Chinese restaurants, nothing raised its head above the parapet, nothing left us awestruck at how much love was lavished on its creation.

We sat and supped a glass of delicious house red while our table was prepared alongside six bulbous goldfish which bobbed about their tank unenthusiastically. Getting sugar-free drinks was an ongoing challenge throughout the evening, and diabetic Genial became increasingly paranoid that the staff were trying to kill him.

But otherwise the service was polite and unhurried as we were shown into the restaurant. Neither cavernous nor cosy, the pleasant white-and-mahogany interior was ram-jammed with diners, most of whom looked as though they were on awkward dates, or maybe that was just us.

Dazzled by the impressive menu of sizzling Cantonese dishes as we crunched some (strangely sweet) prawn crackers, we trusted the chef's special set menu (£19.80 each). Our mixed bag of hot hors d'oeuvres came in with neither a bang nor a whimper. The satay chicken was tender and tangy and the crispy golden cups were a highlight: morsels of chicken blended with oriental mushroom in a light pastry case. The rest (including won tons and sesame prawns on toast) was fair-to-forgettable.

Aromatic shredded duck came and went in a whirl of hunger and fulfilment, leaving no cause for complaint.

Of the mains, the crispy chilli beef

Highs and lows: The subdued interior is the perfect setting for a monochrome menu in a bird's nest was my favourite with its perfect blend of savoury and spice. We were also treated to some chicken with peppers and black bean sauce, special fried rice and vegetables in oyster sauce which were just the job. Our joy was somewhat cancelled out by disappointment, though, with the peculiar fruity sweet and sour pork, peppered with the unusual addition of that beloved Chinese staple: strawberries!

All in all, we had a thoroughly mediocre evening, with light and dark, highs and lows in equal measure to create a balanced experience of yin and yang, neither here nor there...

SPURS SPOOKED BY VAN PERSIE

Pictures by ADAM HOLT

Van the man: Van Persie celebrates after opening the scoring, while Bentley and Jenas are left to reflect on a sorry afternoon for Spurs

But Bassong still eyes top four spot despite being crushed by Arsenal

By Lee Husson

SEBASTIEN BASSONG says Spurs can still secure a top-four finish this season – despite their Halloween horror-show at the Emirates Stadium on Saturday.

A truly inept performance from Harry Redknapp's side saw bitter north London rivals Arsenal breeze to an easy 3-0 win, with a stunning late first-half double from Robin van Persie and a superb goal from skipper Cesc Fabregas – who scored 11 in-game seconds after the opener – paving way for a comprehensive victory.

Redknapp was made to pay for his negative approach, with Spurs hardly fashioning a chance over 90 minutes, and van Persie sealed the win in the second half.

But Bassong (right), who limped off with a hamstring injury and is likely to face a month out of action, is confident they can still snatch a top four finish, although he admits they will have to improve drastically.

"We have big quality in the squad and if we improve and work hard, we can take a top four position," he said.

"We need to keep working and work every day. To be in the top four, we need more.

"It was really not a good day for the club or the fans. It was the worst day of the season."

All the talk before Saturday's derby was from the Tottenham camp, with Robbie Keane, Peter Crouch and Redknapp all insisting Tottenham were at least equal, if not better than their rivals.

But Arsenal made a mockery of those claims as they extended their unbeaten league record over their visitors to 20 matches.

The Gunners bossed possession in the first half, with the visitors happy to sit back and try and nick a goal by playing the long ball up to lone front-man Crouch.

But they switched off just before the break, allowing Bacary Sagna to cross and van Persie got in front of a static Ledley King to poke past Heurelho Gomes in goal.

Worse was to come as straight from the kick-off Wilson Palacios lazily lost possession and Fabregas surged from the centre circle past the Honduran and Tom Huddlestone, before nutmegging King and firing beyond Gomes.

"Scandalous", was how Redknapp described it.

And van Persie benefited from an awful mix-up between Gomes and King to compound Spurs' misery with the third after the break.

Haringey undone by Tring's late show

Tring Athletic 2 Haringey Borough 0

Molten Spartan Premier Division

TWO goals in the last 20 minutes ended Haringey Borough's hopes of getting any points from Saturday's trip to Spartan Premier Division high-flyers Tring Athletic.

Borough have enjoyed a good record at Tring's Grass Roots Stadium in recent years, and for much of this game it looked as if they would pick up at least a draw for their efforts.

However, it was the hosts who were the more dangerous side, and visiting keeper Yannick Nlate had to make several fine saves prior to the interval to ensure that the scores remained level.

Nlate was called into action on an even more regular basis in the second half as Tring piled on the pressure, and the hosts were finally rewarded for their efforts when Andy Mullins headed in the opening goal on 73 minutes.

And the outcome was effectively sealed by the second goal five minutes later – an unmarked Vinnie Iannone stooping at the near post to head a corner into the net.

Borough did belatedly show a greater attacking threat in the closing stages, but Chima Eberendu wasted their best chance when he took too long to control the ball and was forced into a hasty scuffed shot which was easily saved.

Haringey Borough host Biggleswade United on Saturday (3pm).

Massara adds to Skolars squad

THE London Skolars have confirmed another two signings in the past week as they continue to strengthen their squad in advance of the new rugby league season.

Having finished rooted to the bottom of the Co-Operative Championship One table last time around, head coach James Massara is determined to transform their fortunes as he prepares for his first campaign in charge of the club.

And he believes that back-row forward Oliver Purslow, who has spent the past five years with Harlequins Rugby League and was their 2009 reserve team Man of Steel, as well as Australian-born full-back Joshua Welsh – an arrival from South London Storm – will prove to be significant additions.

"Ollie has some obvious leadership qualities having been captain at Quins, and is a handful in both attack and defence," he said.

"I know he has turned down some opportunities to play elsewhere in order to stay in London and be part of what we are building here.

"Josh adds a wealth of experience. He is looking forward to the challenge and I am sure he will bring a lot to the team."

Purslow added: "I am excited by the fresh challenge of playing for the Skolars. I have turned down offers from France and up north because I believe we have a team capable of success down here."
